Long Lasting Left and Right Bank Harness Options for Caterpillar G3520C Engine

These aftermarket harnesses represent a substantial improvement over the OEM harness, offering a longer service life and improved reliability.

LH harness: BG P/N 26465 replaces CAT P/N 221-9566

RH harness: BG P/N 26470 replaces CAT P/N 221-9565

The key advantages offered by these harnesses are:

- Longer Harness Life: The harnesses incorporate a high temperature grade wire insulation that has a 400° F temperature threshold, resulting in a much longer life expectancy.
- Rugged Jacketing Protection: The harnesses have an extremely durable metal or organic polymer thermoplastic (depending upon location) outer braid. This provides exceptional abrasion and impact protection.
- Superior Harness Shielding: The metal braid that is used in place of the OEM's wrapped foil design provides both improved conductive EMI protection as well as a strengthened barrier.
- Improved Harness Routing: The new design takes advantage of improved harness routing on the engine. This configuration allows the harness branches to be located away from high heat sources and areas of extreme wear (exhaust manifold, engine block, between the cylinder banks).
- Reduced Downtime and Cost due to Easier Installation and Maintenance: The installation of these harnesses is simplified. The modular design also allows for efficient maintenance. When a section fails, it will not be necessary to replace the entire harness. Simply unscrew the connector and replace the damaged section.
- Improved Connector interfaces: The plastic OEM connectors have been replaced with military grade connectors. These are made of high grade anodized aluminum, resulting in a far more durable and longer lasting interface.
- Reparable Design: These harnesses feature replaceable components. Pending harness condition, damaged parts may be repairable thereby further extending the harness life.
